What's Cooking

with Kathy Lloyd

An old favorite!

I baked for the Lakeview Methodist care center coffee cart this weekend, every afternoon Monday thru Friday the coffee cart makes the rounds to the residents offering coffee, juice, cookies, bars or the like. Some of our local churches, Lakeview auxiliary members and caring volunteers sign up to provide these goodies. The residents love the home baked treats, perhaps it reminds them of when they were able to bake or maybe it gives them a warm feeling knowing there are people in the community who care enough about them to provide the goodies. The Lakeview kitchen staff can also bake cookies but they just aren't the same as home baked. Yesterday I made some bars that my Mom used to bake frequently that I hadn't made for a long time, they have simple ingredients that one usually has on hand, an oldie but a goodie as the saying goes!

Chocolate topped Oatmeal Bars

1 cup butter, softened 1/2 cup brown sugar 1/2 cup granulated sugar 2 egg yolks, or I just use one whole egg 1 cup + 1 tablespoon flour 1 cup quick oatmeal 1/2 pkg. milk chocolate chips

Cream butter with sugars, add egg, mix well, stir in flour and oatmeal. With a wet hand press dough evenly into a greased 9x13 inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes, or until edges are just becoming brown. Immediately after taking from the oven scatter the chips on top of the hot bars, set back into the over for a minute or two, then spread melted chips as you would frosting, cool and cut into bars. Stay warm and have a great week!

Darwin Anthony, Business Owner, Artist, Writer

The large grove surrounds the well-known Filberg/Posivio Century Farm. The grove is filled with large old trees. It also has young trees, brush, and climbing vines. It is a world in its own.

The grove has served the family well. It has protected the buildings from the fierce Northwest winter winds. The cold winds barely reach the farmyard of this prairie farm for the many trees that surround the farm site protect it with their loving arms. The home and large red barn have been restored. The character of the farm has been preserved. Its rich heritage reaches forth to the next generation. This very high producing farm is a very part of them.

The large grove serves the family in many ways. It is a place to store things. It is where the rocks have been piled over the years. The rocks have been picked from the fields of the century farm. It is a place for children. It turns into their own special world as they run, climb, and play under the giant trees that seem to welcome the next generation of children. Strangers do not know this world. Someone must have a feeling for the family to understand its grove. I know them well and visited their grove today. I drove around the edge of the grove on the field road. It is such a special place that you want to whisper. There is a fear of waking some of the sleeping things of the past.

Much of the horse machinery that was used in the past stands in the grove. Its rich rust color and unique shapes can be seen from the field road. The trees have grown up, and many times through, the old machines. They give the impression that they are just waiting for something. They seem to how it was used to cultivate corn on the century farm. It speaks of the day after day of drudgery for both horse and man. It was the cultivator's task to keep the cornfields clear of weeds. There were no farm chemicals to assist the farmer in having clean fields in those times. It was the many trips over the fields with this cultivator that kept the weeds under control. The uplifted sickle bar of a horse drawn hay mower and the curled rake teeth of the dump rake speak of know that they are safe from the iron cutters that scour the countryside looking for old iron when they hide under the trees of the giant grove. It is as though they are resting from their many years of service. Maybe they are. The horse drawn cultivator with its many downreaching shanks, each shank with its own flat shaped shovel, speaks of the haying operations of long ago. A horse drawn corn planter, with its long pole that held the planter up between the horses as it was attached to a neck yoke, seems ready to plant if someone would only come and hook up a team of horses. The grove is full of such wonderful relics! It is THE MUSEUM OF THE PAST. The relics seem appropriate in the grove. They have lived un- It stands der the shade of the giant trees for many years. It is their home.

But of all the machines, it is the giant machine that sits on the outer edge of the grove that catches my eve. It was so large that it could not be moved back into the trees. It had to stay on the outer edge. It was the proper place for it as it was that important to the farming operation of the past. They gray colored threshing machine sits quietly with trees growing up around it. The parking of such an important machine in such a manner could be thought of as something sad. I find it the opposite. I see this in quiet tones. It asked me of the grove as the gentle machine as a barker much how long it will be before prairie wind echoed.

thought of as a great tent. The prairie wind moved through its hollow pipes the visitors to THE MUSEblower pipe lies across its back as an act of submission. It has served its ownsit idle. The great hopper in the front of the machine seems to wait for something to eat.

The threshing machine waits for someone who appreciates farm history to come along. It whispers its story to those who lislike we see at a county fair. there are no longer people tall on the who understand things outside of what could be like the old machines of the grove. It knows change is coming soon. It sees another generation playing and shouts a welcome to in the grove. There are things worth seeing in the grove of the ers well. It is now time for Filberg/Posivio Century it to rest. The many pulleys Farm located on the rich prairie of Southern Minnesota. It's a wonderful place to visit. Even though this farm is modern in every way, it has a certain remembering quality about it. It remembers the way things were. I stepped back into its past today. Six common tax filing mistakes to avoid to say handing cash to Uncle Sam does not top the list of your favorite things. When it comes to filing taxes, making a small mistake can Depending on how much mean paying more taxes than you need to or forking over cash to cover penalties.

Fortunately, there's an easy way to make sure your tax return is mistake-free: just take a little extra time to double check your work. Here's a closer look at the six most common tax-filing errors and tips to help you avoid making them.

1. Mistake: Not reporting all income. Reporting your income is easy if your employer sends you a wage statement (called Form W-2) documenting what vou made throughout the year. But what about the money you earned from any freelance work? Unfortu- port your income, review

(BPT) - It's probably safe to report extra income from side jobs such as photography shoots, design projects and Etsy shops.

> How to avoid the error: you earned, you may receive "information return" called Form 1099 from the institution that paid you. There are numerous 1099 forms that report different types of income earned during the year, but in some cases you may not receive the document. For example, if you earn less than $600 as a freelance writer, the institution is not required to send you Form 1099-MISC. However, you still need to include the amount earned in your total annual income so it's important to keep your own records of each transaction.

When looking for DIY options, do some comparison shopping. The leading tax preparation software providers offer similar features and benefits, but the price points can widely vary. In many cases, prices increase as the filing deadline nears. Look for a provider like TaxAct that not only offers a low price, but also guarantees your price won't increase if you start your online return but wait to file later.

4. Mistake: Not e-filing. While 91 percent of tax returns were e-filed in 2016, there are still filers who file a paper return. Going the pencil and paper route often means longer tax return processing times.

How to avoid the error: Electronic filing (e-filing) is the quickest and most accurate way to file your tax return. In fact, the IRS typically processes e-filed returns within 48 hours. If you're due a refund, you'll get it quicker if you e-file and choose direct deposit.

5. Mistake: Incorrect calculations. When the IRS receives your tax return, one of the first steps the agency takes is to check the figures to make sure they add up. Unfortunately, it's easy to subtract.

How to avoid the error: First, take your time and double check all numbers. Second, consider using DIY tax software so you don't ing statuses to help you sehave to do the math on your lect the one most appropri-

The Bride and Groom's financial responsibilities

It can be a bit confus- it comes to their wedding al party bouquets. ing when trying to figure out who is to pay for what, especially when it comes to the bride and groom. Brides and grooms sometimes feel obligated to pay for everything, while others don't feel the need to pay for anything.

Though the whole "who pays for what" depends somewhat on culture and family expectations, there certain guidelines about what the bride and groom are to pay for when

The Boutonnieres

When it comes to the the grooms are expected to provide and pay for when it comes to their best man and their groomsmen. You and your bride can select a boutonniere based on your theme and wedding colors at the same time you are ordering the flowers for your big day.

The Transportation

Though you are not on the hook to pay for everyone's transportation, when it comes to your wedding party you should be paying for a limo or a party bus to swing by and pick them up.

NOTE: If you are having a destination wedding which does not allow people to have their own personal vehicles to travel in, you should generally be the meal.

The Accommodations

In some cases, it may be appropriate to arrange and pay for your attendants accommodations. If you are having a destination wedding, this can be rather costly and is generally not an expectation of any guests who are coming. Guests who are going to a destination wedding know full well that they will need to save up and pay for their own accommodations.

Scientists believe that in autumn, the shorter days trigger the beginning of winter dormancy in plants. As the temperatures lower, plants acclimate to the cold and begin a deeper stage of dormancy: cell processes slow down, and some water begins to leave the cells, since freezing water can burst cells. Sugars and other protective chemicals with lower freezing points are increased. Plants have a maximum level of cold they can tolerate, which varies by species and even variety, and may be determined by its location.
